

What is not true about Karma

Karma determines what that person's next life will be like. The force created by a person's actions causes good or bad things to happen to that person.

What is the greatest force in a person's life is not always because of what they do, but the act that Jesus Christ and his determination for His will upon their life. It is not always acts of good or bad. First to believe in Karma is to believe in reincarnation. Reincarnation in Hinduism, which is what karma is a part of, is to die, and return as anything else. A bug, cattle, a person, a snake. The real truth to the matter is that a person is a living soul inside of a body that dies, and it does live again. But it does not come back as a snake or a bug or any other thing. It is re-enlivened by the force of God upon it, and returns as the same thing that it was, a human being. Though this body may be empowered to face the supernatural life by rising again, or to understand that God is real by the meeting of him in a death experience, it is not all of our doings along that determines what we will be. The bible says it does not determine what yet we shall be but that when we shall see him, we shall be like him.

The life before us is not only set by our reactions toward mankind, and others in the family that we are born, but also the will force and impact of the will of God upon our lives. Yes we must respond to God's call and surrender to his will. Of this we must be willing, but this does not mean that if we fail, or the fact that we are full of sin that we shall be destroyed. Many actions of persons are a response to the inner man that is froth with the health given in the process of being fearfully and wonderfully made.

Others of the fact that those who sometimes seem to the worse kind of person realize they need a savior, and in doing so, surrender to the will of God, so that the penalty for their sins are laid on Jesus Christ, instead of the person themselves.

Even though we react in certain ways to others and to life, does not mean that we shall receive mistake for mistake, eye for an eye, or badness or goodness for the equal. It does however mean that we can turn finally to God for help in life's situations and find peace. We can be given grace. Life as we have heard it told, is not fair. Neither is it, for the entrance of sin upon it, expected to be this continuous flowing motion of a river that becomes what we have given. As such, to the eyes of many, why did President Kennedy die, Martin Luther King, and Abraham Lincoln. Did they reap what they have sown? Is then trying to live well and doing the right thing always going to yield a good life? Of course not, but it can in many cases provide a good future. But the real reason is the actions of ourselves and others opinions on our efforts as well as a plan of God, can use such things to mature us.

We are not a bad person, because bad things befall us. Sometimes bad things can be the peninsula upon which good things are born, no matter who is the cause and source of them. Be encouraged in the circumstances of life that you can get up again. KARMA is not our destiny and It is not that a person's goodness, or righteousness, that they never fail, or fall, but that they remember to find a way and often through God himself, to get back up again. This is a true gift of life.

Karma is not our true life's destination's definition, but the mercy of God guiding our lives...is.
